Dear Guest and Members:

Welcome to the 82nd Annual Educational Conference of North Carolina Public Health Association, Inc. We would also like to welcome the Southern Health Association members to this joint conference.

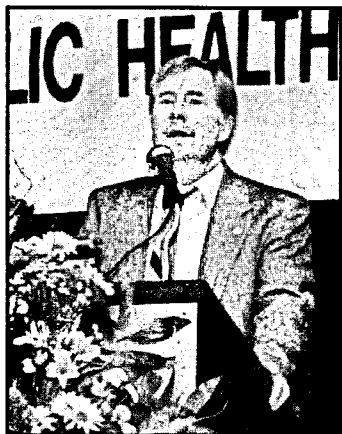

I have enjoyed working with the Program Committee this year along with Deborah Rowe. The theme this year "Action Today-Changes Tomorrow" is very appropriate to what is happening with health care reform. For your convenience, we have prepared a Program-at-a-Glance to better acquaint you with the more than twenty workshops for participants to choose. The topics vary from Lifestyles Management to Environmental Health. Take this opportunity for peer exchange and learn something new because there are topics of interest to all sections. Don't forget to visit the exhibitors who participate with us each year. With Southern Health members attending, it is a great opportunity to benefit from exchanging, meeting, interacting with those from other states who are doing the same job you are.

Please take advantage of Wilmington or New Hanover County hospitality. Should you have any questions or particular needs, please let them know.

Enjoy the site and have a good time learning something new, because with your input we can act today to make changes for tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Dicie S. Alston
Vice-President of Education

Dear North Carolina and Southern Health
"Public Healthers",

The Executive Committee and Governing Council welcomes you to the 1993 Annual NCPHA Educational Conference. We also welcome our friends and colleagues from the Southern Health Association. I want to thank Mr. Bob Parker and the New Hanover County Health Department for hosting this meeting and Ms. Susan O'Brien for chairing the local arrangements committee. I also want to thank Ms. Dicie Alston, Vice-President for Education, and the program chairs from all Sections for their hard work in organizing this year's conference. I think you all have done a great job in making this a conference to remember!

I want to thank each of you for your contributions to Public Health in North Carolina during this past year and for giving me the opportunity to serve as your President in 1992-93. I also want to thank the officers, members of the Governing Council and Ms. Deborah Rowe, NCPHA's Administrative Assistant, for their willingness to assist me and all members of this organization for the many requests and demands made during the past year.

I hope each of you will benefit from this year's Annual Educational Conference and will take home information that will assist each of you with your job or motivate you to shift your paradigms to improve public health services across the state. The theme for this year's meeting "Action Today Change Tomorrow" focuses on the fact that major changes in public health and other health care systems will occur during the next few years. We must prepare for change in our health care system and try to meet the challenges that change will bring. We must not continue to operate with paradigm paralysis; but, we must look to the future and improve public health services in North Carolina and the nation.

Welcome to Wilmington, have a great meeting and don't forget to HAVE FUN!

Sincerely,

Leonard Wood
President of NCPHA

Please allow me this opportunity to welcome each one of you to the joint meeting of the North Carolina Public Health Association and the Southern Health Association. It is, indeed, a pleasure to meet with our Affiliated Associations. The real strength of public health rests at the local level where services are delivered. By the same token, the real strength of the Southern Health Association lies with the Affiliated Associations which comprise this regional organization.

We are embarking on new directions in the entire arena of health care delivery and financing in this country and in each of our states. This is not only a time of challenge for public health, but it is a time to affirm the role that public health has played in the past in shaping the future of those we serve. For a new approach to be effective and cost-efficient, we must ensure that a strong element of public health be woven into the fabric that forms the new system. We cannot take our past contributions to society for granted. The health professionals responsible for providing those services must become active in the development of any new or reformed approach.

The theme of this year's joint educational conference sets the stage for the future. There is no doubt that change will occur. What occurs will be the result of those actions we take now. The program includes all aspects of public health, both personal health services and environmental health services, the latter of which is often overlooked when dealing with health care reform. But environmental health is an integral part of public health, and the future depends on how well we address those aspects when planning for the next century.

I look forward to meeting each one of you and to discussing the exciting times that public health is now entering. On behalf of the Governing Council and the Program Planning Committee of the Southern Health Association, I express sincere appreciation to the North Carolina Public Health Association for planning such an excellent program and for inviting us to share in it. I wish all of you a most successful education conference.

Sincerely,

Ted Hanekamp
President
